When I was 7 and Stevie was 6, our parents taught us how to play chess and other games. Playing games was our life back then. Stevie and I were very competitive (好胜的) in everything.

We got older and better so our games were more serious, but also more exciting. The strange thing is that I enjoyed the games very much and was happy for my brother when he won. But then, I did not feel right and became less confident than before.

When I was 10 years old, I wanted to be successful at my talents. One day, I thought I had to find something Stevie couldn't do. Before long, I got Jimmy Nelson's record on “How to Become a Ventriloquist (腹语师)” and I practiced every day. After summer vacation, I did my first show for my class. The show was welcomed. Then I did a lot of shows to practice my new skill.

Learning ventriloquism (腹语，口技) wasn't easy. The difficult part was developing the voice, because at first, it was soft and hard to hear. I memorized the routines and performed more. With time, I got better responses. The loud laughter continued along with the applause (掌声).

Four years later, my mother bought a professional ventriloquist figure, which I named Freddie O' Sullivan. He was very human-like with, big eyes. Treating Freddie like a real person helped improve my performance. In college, Freddie was well known. Over the years, I won many talent prizes.

One time, an old man who had watched my show with his family looked at Freddie carefully and asked him where he got his trousers. ★ I didn't know what was going on until I was told later that the gentleman hadn't spoken for 20 years.

Thanks to my brother, I created a lifetime with Freddie.

59 · Which of the following can be put in ★ ?

- A · That was what I wanted to ask B · There were a lot of strangers around at that time
C · As people passed by, some heard a strange voice D · His family looked at him with wet, moved eyes

Put water in a paper cup and place it over a candle. The water will boil! During boiling, the temperature of the water remains at around 100° C because the energy taken in by the water is used to change its state rather than increase its temperature. It means that while the water is boiling, it stops the paper cup from reaching its burning point. So the paper cup does not burn as long as there is enough water to take in the heat.
