My daughter works as a waitress on weekends to help pay her way through school and to pick up skills she will be able to use, as she goes after her dream of performing in musical theater.

Last weekend, two women were present as she was at her position. When she handed them their bill, neither of them could afford it. They looked badly embarrassed and didn't know what to say. After a while, the younger woman took her aside and explained that they were having a hard time because they both lost their jobs.

My daughter covered the cost of their meal and wrote a note that read something like this: "This meal is on me. I hope you have brighter days ahead." Then she gave the note to the younger woman. She felt great about it. It wasn't a large amount of money, but it seemed to light up the mood (心情) of the two women.

However, she found it amazing that the world repaid her kindness so promptly. Within two hours, another customer left her a $10.00 tip (小费), which was more than the money she paid for the young woman.

In my daughter's act of kindness, she was not expecting anything in return. She just understands that being kind is its own reward. "You can't give more than the world can give back to you," she said. I could hear the smile in her voice during our conversation.

The world always provides its abundance (丰富) when we offer ours. Similarly, we can never get away with cheating others. The world always reflects our knowledge.

35. What would be the best title for the passage?

C. The Moment is Touching D. Brighter Days are Ahead

“Reduce, reuse, recycle,” these are the three Rs that environmental activists have stressed. But how can we realize them? Recently, this idea came to life in China in a clever way in a famous scenic spot (风景区) in Dunhuang, Northwest China’s Gansu Province.

With the arrival of the tourist season, the scenic spot has been crowded with visitors around 20,000 a day since July. With so many people, the challenge of managing waste has become more serious, putting cleaners under pressure. So, the scenic spot came up with a fun way to help: “Trash hunt for gifts.” Here’s how it works: Visitors are given trash bags and encouraged to pick up litter around the site (地点). In return, they get small gifts showing Dunhuang’s rich culture.

Isn’t this another good form of the three Rs spirit? I still remember going to some scenic spots, especially historical sites where people gather in a small area. At these places littering is something we always have to try hard to deal with. Not only does it influence the cleanliness of a site, but it is also likely to harm the natural environment. So, when I saw how the “Trash hunt for gifts” program was carried out, it was clear this way was more than just a trick to attract attention. It was truly an effort to encourage a culture of responsibility and care. The activity does more than just cleaning up the area. It turns every visitor into an environmental guard, actively taking part in protecting the beauty of the site.

★ Other places in China are also doing similar things. It’s great to see that tourists are not just enjoying the sights, but also helping to protect them. Turning tourists into environmental guards is a new and exciting way to keep our scenic spots clean and beautiful for everyone to enjoy. It’s a reminder that while we enjoy the beauty around us, we also have the power to protect it.

36. In which picture can we see “Trash hunt for gifts”?

37. How do visitors take part in “Trash hunt for gifts”?

- A. By buying trash bags. B. By picking up trash.
C. By giving out gifts. D. By spreading Dunhuang culture.

38. From the passage, we can know that “Trash hunt for gifts” program _____.

- A. was started by visitors in Dunhuang B. was aimed at drawing public attention
C. forced visitors to clean up the spots D. helped to make it easier for cleaners

39 Which of the following can be put in ★?

- A. The idea is spreading B. People love the gifts
C. Dunhuang becomes more attractive D. Visitors become more active 40 What’s the purpose of the passage?

- A. To explain what the three Rs are. B. To show how to face challenges during the trip.
C. To introduce a new way of travelling. D. To encourage people to be guardians of nature.
