"Belle, you have to be realistic," my dad said as we drove to the shelter(收容所). "She's been gone too 36. You're not going to find her. She's either been hit by a car or been taken in by someone who 37 her." Dad was a typical realist, which meant he spent a whole lot of time trying to prepare me for the 38.

"Well, I just have a 39," I said. Sure, it had been half a year since Sula, my lost cat, had gone missing, but I still had belief. Miracles(奇迹) happened every day, after all.

At the shelter, a staff member took us to see the cats. "When did she go missing?" the woman asked.

"Six months ago."

"And was she chipped (植入芯片)?" No, I had to be 40, Sula was not. The staffer's face noticeably darkened. "When we get unchipped cats, they're 41 for adoption (领养) after three days," she explained, "Even if your cat was brought in, she's probably 42 by now."

We walked through rows of cages. I looked carefully at cats of all shapes and 43. None of them was my small Sula. Then I noticed a 44 farther back. I pushed ahead. "Sweetheart, that's 45 they keep the cats that just came in," Dad said, "Your cat wouldn't be in there."

"It doesn't hurt to 46!" I said.

I stepped in the room and heard familiar "meow". My eyes zeroed in on a little cat with big green eyes. She was skinnier than I 47, but it was Sula all right! I 48 the cage door. Sula practically jumped into my arms.

"Dad! It's Sula!" I cried.

"There's just no 49 ..." he said with his eyes wide open.

It turned out, Sula's 50 wasn't the only miracle. The next day, when Dad came downstairs, he was wearing a new PINK shirt that he once said he would never wear. It read: I believe!

四、阅读理解(共15小题,每小题2分,满分30分)

阅读下面三篇材料,从每题所给的A、B、C、D四个选项中,选出最佳选项。

Archery on Ice

In the game, there were three arches(拱门) put on the ice, with a silk ball hung by a rope in the middle of each arch. Players would skate across the ice, led by a person with a flag. Once passing through an arch, they would turn around and try to hit the ball with an arrow. The scene was very powerful, as hundreds of players joined in together, moving in a line like a dragon.

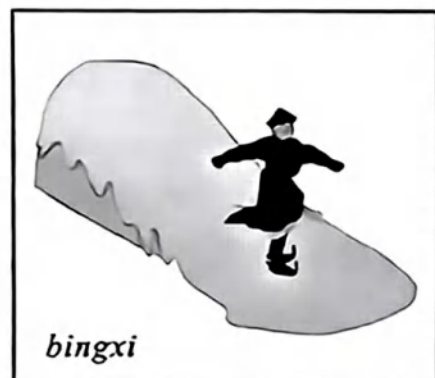

Ice Football

In the match, the players were divided into two teams. They competed to catch a ball thrown into the air above ice. Unlike the ancient Chinese ball game cuju, players were allowed to pass the ball with both their hands and feet. According to historical records, the Qing government later included the sport in army training.

Downhill Ice Skating

On cold winter days, organizers would water a slope(斜坡) about ten meters in length to create an ice track for competitors. Wearing ice skates, competitors would take turns to slide down the slope to show as much of their skating skills as they could. Those who made it down the slope without falling would be named the winner.

B

Sally grew up in a small country in Southeast Asia. She wanted very much to explore(探索) the big world one day. When she was in her late twenties, she got a scholarship(奖学金) to study films in England.

However, life in England was different from the films and television shows. Everything was expensive. Not understanding the culture, she made many mistakes. With only a little English, she felt separated from others. Finally, Sally moved to London and met different people from other parts of the world. Like her, they were still learning English and dealing with culture shocks. Those made her decide to try writing real growing-up stories in English, which moved many people who had similar situations like her. Sally was not lonely anymore.

When Sally turned 30, she believed, "It is when you start achieving your goals: the films you wanted to make, the books you wanted to write, the places you still wanted to see." Sally wrote more books in English and won several awards. More people enjoyed her books, and she was invited to talk at writers' festivals and teach in universities. Her writing and her films had connected her to the world!

Though she was in England, her heart was deeply rooted(根植) in her hometown. After Sally gave birth to her son at 40 in 2013. She decided to visit her hometown more often and spared no effort on film education there.

56. Sally hoped to explore the outside world because _____.

- A. she was not satisfied with her life
B. she wanted to be a director
C. she was interested in it
D. she had a scholarship

57. After going abroad, Sally _____.

C. got used to living there at once D. was regretful and went home later

58. What made Sally's life turning point in England?

- A. Learning languages. B. Meeting Londoners.
C. Making films. D. Writing stories.

59. When Sally was in her thirties, she _____.

A. became confident and successful

B. made mistakes in cross-culture study

C. still felt lonely and homesick

D. traveled to many foreign countries

60. What would be the best title for the passage?

A. A Growing-up Journey

B. A World-changing Girl

C. Go Home or Stay Abroad

D. Remember Who You Are

C

When Oxford University Press (出版社) chose “rizz” as its 2023 Word of the Year, many people asked, “Rizz? Is there such a word?” At the same time, many young English speakers laughed out loud “Jeepers, haven’t you ever heard of rizz?”

Rizz means the ability to attract a person. Are you good at making friends? Do your classmates often laugh loudly at your jokes? Then you probably have rizz. As in “to rizz up someone”, it means to attract someone. The word first appeared on social media as teen slang(俚语) and became popular after the Spider-Man actor Tom Holland said he had “no rizz.”

★ “Jeepers” is another. People use it to express shock. And the word “tea” is no longer just a “drink”. It also means “gossip(闲聊).” Similarly, here in China, words like “xianyanbao” have a new meaning. Teens are also saying “dazi” (pal or friend) and “qimengle” (What?).

These changes show that both English and Chinese are alive. A healthy language, researchers say, should always see new words being created, words being borrowed from other languages and old words taking on new meanings. The changes also show that young people have more influences on society.

When we look back on 2023, one thing stands out: artificial intelligence(AI). Computers have become cleverer than ever. Some AI systems(系统) have “rizzed up” many users with their ability to write long articles, create poems and draw pictures. But they can only use language. Can ChatGPT coin a slang word and make it popular? Can it give a word new meanings? Can it change how we humans speak and write?

You should be proud of your ability to play with words. But while you try to create another slang word, remember to be polite. Also, don’t use slang in your compositions – it won’t “rizz up” your teachers!

61. The young English speakers laughed out loud to express their _____.
A. embarrassment B. happiness C. surprise D. pride
62. According to para. 2, to rizz up others, you should _____.
A. be their close friends first B. laugh loudly at their jokes
C. make yourself liked by them D. try to become a hit
63. Which of the following can be put in ★ _____?
A. Have you ever heard of “jeepers”? B. Rizz is not the only hot slang word.
C. Teens like using slang a lot. D. Maybe you know how to use rizz now.
64. What made languages alive according to the writer?
A. The change of society. B. The influence of researchers.
C. The development of AI. D. The creativity of young people.
65. What's the writer's attitude(态度) towards using slang?
A. He can't stand it. B. He supports it strongly.
C. He's careful about it. D. He doesn't care about it.

第 II 卷(非选择题 共 40 分)

五、词与短语填空(共 5 小题,每小题 2 分,满分 10 分)

仔细阅读下面五个句子,然后用下面方框中所给的单词或短语填空,使每个句子在结构、句义和逻辑上正确。(提示:方框中有二个单词或短语是多余的。)

program /valuable / mentioned / looked up / happen / guess / cheered up

66. Linda said she had something _____ in her schoolbag.
67. Lu Yu, “the sage of tea”, _____ Shen Nong in his book Cha Jing.
68. Some scientists _____ that people can live on other planets one day.
69. An educational _____ teaches children about pandas and other endangered animals.
70. I _____ the history of Erquan Yingyue and began to understand the sadness in the music.

六、综合填空(共 10 小题,每小题 1 分,满分 10 分)

阅读下面短文,根据上下文或括号内单词等提示,在空白处填入适当的单词或括号内单词的正确形式。

Claudia and Cathy are good friends. They do a lot of things together, like going shopping, watching movies, looking after homeless dogs, or just 71 (sit) at a local cafe. Since they take the same school subjects, they would love to study together, but they find this 72 (possible). Their working styles are so completely different 73 they can't be in the same room while they are studying!

Claudia prefers to study in a 74 (total) silent room, but Cathy loves to play music or even have the TV on. Claudia can sit for hours 75 moving, and often gets all of her homework done in one sitting. Cathy, on the other hand, is continually getting up, and says that she thinks best when she's on the move.

You might be asking yourself, which way of studying gets 76 (good) results? Many people argue that a silent setting is the way to go, but it seems that is not necessarily the case. Some research 77 (show) that outside noise often helps some people focus because it makes them form a mental(心理的)“wall” around 78 they are doing and improves their attention. So, if you're a student who chooses 79 (study) while sitting at a table in a busy shopping mall, don't worry about it. And if you work in total silence, that's OK, too. Judging from Claudia and Cathy's study 80 (habit), the best way to study is the way that works for you.

七、书面表达(共1大题,满分20分)
