Putting a Dog in Charge

Every dog has his day. Well, one dog might soon just be lucky enough to be the top dog at Twitter! Elon Musk, the current CEO of Twitter and Tesla jokingly said that he has hired (雇佣) a dog to replace him as Twitter CEO in 2023. Musk tweeted a picture of his pet dog Floki climbing across his desk with the words: “The new CEO of Twitter is amazing.”

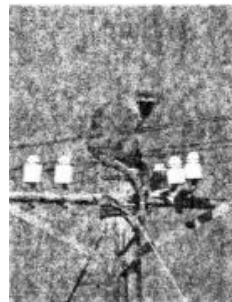

Fish “Take Control”

Did you ever think fish could play video games? Well, it really happened in Japan! Several pet fish played games on their owner’s Nintendo Switch, changed their owner’s avatar (头像) and even ran up a credit card bill! The fish belong to a YouTuber known as “Mutekimaru” who is known for letting a group of his fish “play” video games. Mutekimaru had put in a motion detection (运动感测) tracking device (追踪设备) in his fish tank (鱼缸), allowing the fish to “control” the Nintendo Switch.

Do you ever get annoyed that your Internet isn't working? How annoyed would you be if monkeys were the reason for your problems? This has been happening in a city in India, as macaque monkeys (猕猴) have been getting in the way of Internet services. The government has planned to lay broadband cables (宽带电缆) to connect India's villages, but they find it hard to stop monkeys from eating the cables. Macaque monkeys are sacred (神圣的) there, so they will not be hurt. How would you tell them not to chew the cables?

60. All the news above _____.

- A. is related to social platforms B. is about animals and human society
C. has something to do with pets D. is about humorous animals

Hands and feet can easily get cold in winter. Thick gloves might be a good choice, yet sometimes wearing them is inconvenient, especially when people want to do something with their hands. However, this was not a problem for ancient Chinese people, who had a fine tool to keep their hands warm ---hand warmers.

About the origin (起源), there is no exact written record, but ★. One folk story is about Emperor Yang from the Sui Dynasty visiting Jiangsu in the winter. Due to the bitter cold, craftsmen (工匠) were required to make a small warmer for the emperor to hold in hand. Thus the hand warmer was created. Later in the Song Dynasty, the tool was in widespread use. Skills for producing the tool were widely employed in the Ming and Qing dynasties. And many books recorded people using hand warmers. The Dream of the Red Chamber, the classic novel by Cao Xueqin from the Qing Dynasty, described a servant sending a hand warmer to Lin Daiyu in one chapter.

Made of different materials, ancient hand warmers had lots of fine designs, such as pumpkins, flowers and turtle shells. The designs preferred animals or symbols with good meanings. Inside a hand warmer, there were burning charcoal (木炭) or simple coals. Some coals were blended with broken pieces and pressed into flower shapes, giving off a pleasant smell when burnt.

This useful and fine tool is a symbol of craftsmanship of ancient China.

61. In Paragraph 1, thick gloves are mentioned mainly to _____.
A. show their importance
B. lead into ancient hand warmers
C. explain their origin
D. introduce their inconvenience
62. Which of the following can be put in ____★____?
A. we know exactly when it was created
B. it was surely created for an emperor
C. there are some tales about its invention
D. some facts about this invention can be found
63. According to the passage, hand warmers were widely used _____.
A. during the Song Dynasty
B. long after the Qing Dynasty
C. before the Sui Dynasty
D. only in the Ming Dynasty
64. What can we infer from the passage?
A. Ancient hand warmers are better than modern thick gloves.
B. Poor people were not allowed to use hand warmers.
C. Different designs of hand warmers were made of different materials
D. This craft might reach its peak () in the Ming and Qing Dynasties.
65. The writer mainly wants us to _____.
A. know about hand warmers in ancient China
B. compare thick gloves and old hand warmers
C. spread the craftsmanship of ancient China
D. appreciate the fine designs of ancient hand warmers

C

“Is there anything you want from Grandma’s apartment?” My uncle, texting me, last week.

His mum had passed away the week before, aged 96. He’d begun the painful yet necessary task of dividing her things: keep, sell, donate.

I answered without thinking. “Yes, I would like her aloe (芦荟) in the orange pot, please.”

Sometime around 1975, Grandma received this plant from a local cook as a gift. It could, I suppose, just be anything like a calendar, or a pen, or a box of biscuits. But it just happened to be a plant, which Grandma, who always had green fingers, appreciated and placed in her doorway.

Five years later, my mum married the cook’s son. And had me.

When my father’s mother died in 1993, Grandma told me how this plant was different from the other ones she had in her home. It helped to keep a good relationship between the two sides of the family.

In recent years, whenever we visited Grandma’s apartment, I would show it to my children. “Look at this, it was a gift your great-grandma bought for your other great-grandma! Before they became relatives!”

Many times, Grandma gave me cuttings of this plant, in the hope that I might grow another. Yet, every time, I failed to take care of my offshoots (分支). Aloe is hardy (适应力强). However, if you over-water or under-water it, it dies. It doesn't mix well with dogs or under-heated flooring. In short, with my skills, I'm better off with a plastic one from a supermarket.

But that didn't use to matter, because I could ask Grandma for another cutting and try again. Now I can't. So straight after I asked my uncle for this plant, I came up with the idea: the plant will go and live with Ann, my wife's mother, who can grow plants well and keep hold of Grandma's aloe---at least until I can be trusted to look after its offshoots. Then maybe one day I can confidently place the mother plant in my own home. At the same time, Ann will spread cuttings among her family members, as Grandma used to do.

66. Why did the author ask his uncle for the aloe?

- A. It was very valuable to him.
- B. He wanted to place it in his own home.
- C. He wanted to pass it on to his children.
- D. He wanted to give it as a gift to his wife's mother

67. The underlined phrase “always had green fingers” in paragraph 4 means _____.

- A. always failed in growing plants
- B. always made fingers green
- C. was always good at growing plants
- D. was a special gardener

68. According to the passage, this plant _____.

- A. can grow well with dogs in the house
- B. may die if it is watered too often
- C. is easy to take care of
- D. won't die if the floor is too cold

69. Which of the following is NOT TRUE according to the passage?

- A. The writer's parents might get married around 1980.
- B. The aloe was placed in Grandma's doorway before the writer's birth
- C. The writer planned to leave Grandma's aloe to Ann forever.
- D. Ann can be trusted to look after the aloe well.

70. What would be the best title for the passage?

- A. Remembering Grandma
- B. Passing Down Planting Skills
- C. Caring for an Aloe
- D. Planting Memories

How to get over difficulty

No one can lead a life without difficulty. But how can we get over difficulty? Here is one of my experiences.

I was weak in English in Grade 7, which troubled me a lot. Then I decided to learn English well. From then on, I got up early to memorize new words and useful sentences. Besides, I did many exercises. Indeed, it was not easy to catch up with my classmates, but I kept going and never gave up. At last, my hard work paid off, and I made great progress.
