Seeing Trees: Discover the Extraordinary Secrets of Everyday Trees

《怎样观察一棵树》

By Nancy R. Hugo, US

THE COMMERCIAL PRESS

You know about bird watching, but what about“tree watching”? In this book, published in 2016, Nancy R. Hugo shows you that there's much more to a tree than you may think. By looking at 10 well-known types of trees, Hugo opens up the world of trees, including their leaves, flowers, buds(芽) and bark(树干). She shows you how to look past the leaves to find some tree's “secrets”. Written in easy-to-understand language, Hugo offers ways to kick-start a“tree-watching” hobby. The book also features many amazing tree pictures.

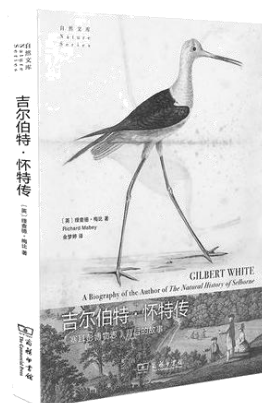

The Natural History of Selborne

《塞耳彭博物志》

By Gilbert White, UK

Penguin Classics

This one is a natural history classic. Written in 1789, the book explores the natural world of Selborne, a village in England where the author lived. Over a period of 20 years, White describes different animals through the changing seasons. We can see the world with the same joy and attention as the author. The book is made up of letters. White wrote to two of his friends. This gives it a feeling of warmth and energy. White wasn't a scientist, just a curious person. This made him“a true natural historian”, said the Natural History Museum of the UK.

B

Anand is from a city in the south of India. In 2017, he was working as an engineer at a car part company.

One day that year, Anand and his friends passed by a smelly, dirty lake. All of a sudden, he tripped(绊倒) and fell into the lake. When his friends pulled him up, he remembered that this lake used to be clean years ago. “Why is it so dirty now?” he wondered.

Something had to be done about it. Anand wanted to get his company to help clean up the lake. He did a lot of research for the project. He found that this lake had once been part of a big network(网状系统) of lakes.

About 1,500 years ago, the Chola Dynasty(朱罗王朝) built this lake network to supply water for farmland.

Anand spent four months studying the Chola methods. All this work won him a social responsibility grant(补助金) from his company.

What's next then? Get people to join his project! Luckily, Anand found hundreds of volunteers in the company. They began to work right away.

By clearing the lake of waste and muck(淤泥), they opened up its blocked(堵塞的) waterways. Then, they built five small islands with the muck and grew many plants on them. Six months later, when Anand boated on the clean lake, he was filled with joy.

Later, Anand left his job to set up a non-profit organization(非营利组织). The NPO works to clean up more lakes. So far, it has cleaned up 35 lakes in the city. Anand's work has not only improved the environment, but also provided clean water for farming and drinking.

- A. The Chola Dynasty had a long history.
B. Many visitors go boating on the clean lake.
C. The car part company is very socially responsible.
D. Anand took pride in what he had done for the company.

65. Which of the following would be the best title for the passage?

- A. A Fall Into the Lake B. A Non-profit Organization
C. A Smelly Dirty Lake D. A Group of Loving Volunteers

C

Xunpu is a small fishing village in Fujian Province. Last year, a few ladies took pictures there and shared them online. In the photos, their hair was tied into buns(发髻) and they wore a wreath(花冠). There were fresh, plastic and silk flowers on the wreath. It is called“Zanhuawei.” The photos were widely spread online. Many tourists started to come to the village. In less than six months, the number of zanhua stores there grew from less than 10 to more than 150.

The tradition of wearing flowers has been a part of local life since the Tang Dynasty. The village is famous for its good seafood. When female villagers sell their seafood at the local market, they put flowers in their hair. This way, buyers can distinguish(识别) them from sellers in nearby villages.

The tradition is also seen at happy events such as weddings. Locals send out invitation cards along with flowers. In turn, their female guests wear the flowers to the event.

★ Kids braid(编织) their hair and put flowers on their temples(鬓). Teenagers tie their hair into a round bun and put flowers in it. Middle-aged women often wear spiral(螺旋形的)buns. They put flowers and gold ornaments(金饰) in their hair. As for elderly women, they prefer red flowers, head scarves and other ornaments.

“If you put flowers in your hair in this life,”the locals believe,“you will be pretty in the afterlife!”In 2008, the tradition was listed as part of China's intangible cultural heritage(非物质文化遗产).

66. What is the symbol of Zanhuawei?

- A. Plenty of fresh seafood. B. The wishes for a better life.
C. The ages of different people. D. The long history of the village.
