Meng Xiang was crazy about films and music during his childhood. When he started college, he dreamed to make films that could combine (结合) his love for storytelling and interest in music.

His biggest challenge came when he planned to make a film about a tennis player. Since no one would offer him money for a 2-hour film, Meng and his college friends tried to make a shorter one. They bought a second-hand camera and used old things instead of expensive equipment (设备). They even made a shelf on their own to support the camera.

Meng and his friends worked hard, rain or shine. When filming the tennis player, they ran after him in the summer sun. If it rained and they couldn't film outside, they hung bed sheets (床单) on the walls in an empty room to set up a simple studio (摄影棚). This 12-minute film got much attention. The teachers and students in their college liked the music they created for it.

After that, Meng had another idea: to make a musical film. But musicals weren't popular in college, and many said it wouldn't work. Instead of listening to the doubts, Meng and his team spent weeks writing new songs and making a test video. To film the moving scenes, they fixed a smartphone on a skateboard and pushed it. The actors' hair was blowing in the wind while they were dancing and singing. The loud voice and laughter of the team filled the air.

Their musical film was well received and won several awards at a film festival. As Meng said, "Making films isn't about having the best equipment or famous actors. It's about finding new ways to tell your story. Our team is planning to make a special documentary about environment. And I can't wait to write music for it."

31. How would Meng combine his hobbies according to paragraph 1?

- A. By creating music. B. By starting a team.
C. By going to college. D. By producing films.

32. What was the team's biggest challenge?

- A. Few partners. B. People's doubts.
C. The money problem. D. Long working time.

33. Why did Meng's team set up a simple studio?

- A. To work on rainy days. B. To get much attention.
C. To follow the tennis player. D. To film a moving scene.

34. What can be learned from the last sentence of paragraph 4?

- A. The actors were popular. B. The team enjoyed the process.
C. Meng wanted to make another film. D. The students had good equipment.

35. What would be the best title for the passage?

- A. To See Is to Believe B. Success Comes From Honesty
C. Music Is the Best Language D. Hard Work Makes Dream Work

Do you know the five main senses we have? They are touch, taste, sight, smell and hearing. They are controlled by different parts of our brains. So we call the brain our built-in "BeiDou". Brains help our bodies work smoothly. Try this: close your eyes and touch your nose. It's easy, right? That's because our brains can receive messages about where our body parts are. We can also stand on one leg without falling down. If we lose our balance, our brains will give us orders to fix it.

★ . Tests show that people see spider pictures faster than flowers. Some researchers also found that people react (作出反应) to loud noises faster than to a friend's voice. Scientists aren't completely sure about the reasons. Some suggest that this skill might come from ancient times. Our ancestors were often faced with predators. So they had to protect themselves from dangerous animals like spiders and tigers, or they would lose their lives. Until today, we still jump at sudden noises or shadows (影子) in dark rooms.

Here is more about brains. Can you imagine seeing colors when you hear music, or tasting candy when you see the sunshine? It's called sense mixing. Scientists think this happens when different senses intermingle (相互交织). Another fact is that temperature sometimes influences our senses. Some people can feel storms coming through knee pain. So we often joke that we're "human weather apps". Also, our brains are able to make adjustment (调整) to some senses. If someone can't see well, his hearing or touch might become stronger.

Though scientists have done much research on the brain, there's still a lot to do. Have you ever wondered why some people are better at sports? What's the secret to improving memory? Then it's time for you to start your discovering journey.

36. What do the two examples in the first paragraph show?

- A. Brains help our bodies work well. B. Human brains are different.
C. Humans can touch their noses easily. D. People have many living habits.

37. Which of the following can be put in ★ ?

- A. It's fun to study our ancestors' life B. It's easy to learn about senses
C. Animals help people in many ways D. Brains are also life-saving heroes

38. Which animal in the following pictures is probably a “predator” ?
A. B. C. D.
39. According to paragraph 3, what might happen if your senses mix?
A. You can tie your shoes without looking.
B. You taste sweetness when seeing an apple.
C. You jump when someone shouts suddenly.
D. You feel pain in your knees before the rain comes.
40. What is the writing purpose of the last paragraph?
A. To improve people’ s memory. B. To encourage brain studies.
C. To show the value of our brains. D. To admire scientists’ efforts.

Good morning, everyone! Now I’ d like to talk about my new skill.

Bright helpers, bright ideas

Students at a middle school in Finland design special “Learning Boxes” for younger kids. Each box has picture books, math games, and DIY (Do It Yourself) guides in it. Last week, over 200 boxes were given to first-graders with encouraging secret notes like “You’ re amazing!” from the designers. “I made letter cards myself!” cheered 7-year-old Ella, holding her new box. Teachers say that the boxes help little kids study alone after school.

Seed (种子) library shines

Some teenagers from a Canadian middle school have started a “Seed Library” to help grow plants. They collect seeds from gardens and put them into paper bags with planting advice. “Take seeds, grow them, and return new seeds later,” said the team leader Helen. Brian planted the sunflower seeds from the library. Now his garden is filled with yellow flowers. “I’ll save the seeds for others,” he smiled. The team will offer seed-saving classes next month.

A group of 13-year-olds in a school of Wuhan visited some aged people last week. They recorded old stories about local festivals, foods and traditions, and then turned them into picture books. They also set up a mini-museum with old photos and handmade works. With their teachers’ help, they developed an app called “Hometown Echoes”. It can turn Wuhan dialect (方言) into putonghua.
