- "Click, click, click ..." the drummer hit the drumsticks against each other to give a beat. Then the band started to play, faster and faster. Kai played a guqin piece along with the drums. When the music ended, there was a(n) ____11____ silence. He turned to look at the teachers.
- Mr Li asked, "What were you trying to express?"
- "I wanted to do something different ... to make the guqin sound ____12____." Kai answered in a low voice.
- "Well, it's a good try. ____13____, you know it has over 3,000 years of history. I don't think you've presented the guqin well," said Mr Li. "The drums were too loud. I'm afraid I can't give you high marks."
- "Please, can I have another ____14____?" begged Kai.
- After a short discussion, the teachers agreed.
- Later, alone in the hall, Kai sat in silence. "I understand what you were trying," Kai ____15____ and saw Miss Zhou by his side. "But ____16____ you can break the rules, you have to master them."
- Kai looked ____17____, as if turning her words over in his mind.

"The bottom board of the guqin symbolizes the earth and the rounded ____18____ board symbolizes the sky. A wonderful guqin performance shows the harmony between humans and nature."

"Miss Zhou, is it fine to play the guqin with other instruments?"

"Well, it' s ____19____ played alone," replied Miss Zhou. "Sometimes, it can be played with the dizi or another guqin. And you know, there' s Chinese philosophy (哲理) behind every form of art. That' s what makes Chinese art special. We should try hard to keep the value of traditions and then ____20____ them with modern life."

"Can I make it modern?" Kai wondered if it was a stupid question.

"Sure. But try to find the right way to keep its ____21____ first."

That night, Kai thought hard about the next show. "How can I ____22____ the guqin and balance the traditional spirit with a new touch?" he wondered.

Then, he had an idea — Why not play a piece of pop music, but in a ____23____ style?

The next day, Kai sat behind the guqin and let his fingers dance ____24____ across the strings (弦). A familiar pop melody filled the hall — yet every note carried the beauty of ancient Chinese music. No drums, no ____25____. Just the guqin. When the last note ended, the silence this time was not embarrassing, because it was followed by clapping hands.

I first saw Tai Chi in Ottawa' s Chinatown. Men and women stood in a gentle group, moving slowly and smoothly. I was amazed by its beauty. Yet I could not understand its true meaning at that time. I only admired Tai Chi from a distance (距离).

Years later, my doctor strongly advised me to attend a Tai Chi class for beginners. At first, I thought my goal was to master the 108 moves. However, things turned out to be very different from what I had thought.

The people in the class moved smoothly and never seemed confused about what to do next. They told me that they had been beginners too, and that I would learn all the moves in three or four years. Three or four years! I could get a university degree in less time. But I could see they were right: only through hard work and practice could I make progress.

Later, I joined an advanced class (高级班). Once the teacher asked me to show my moves. To be chosen was an honor, but I was very embarrassed. Everyone stopped and watched as the teacher corrected my moves.

“Don’ t bend,” he said. I tried again. “Straighten your back,” he said. This went on for only a few minutes, but it felt like hours.

I couldn’ t just say, “Yes, I understand.” I had to show it. I focused harder than ever before. Meanwhile, I was letting go of old habits and learning new ones. I realized I was also learning a new attitude toward life—truly listening and willing to be corrected.

I don’ t know if I will ever master the 108 moves. But Tai Chi has taught me that growth is always possible, even when I face difficulties.

31. What did the writer choose to do when first seeing Tai Chi?

- A. Join the Tai Chi group. B. Attend a Tai Chi class.
- C. Watch from a distance. D. Walk away at once.

- A. learning Tai Chi takes too long
- B. three or four years is a short time
- C. Tai Chi is as hard as a university degree
- D. getting a university degree is more useful

33. Once in the advanced class, the writer felt embarrassed because of _____.

- A. arriving late for class B. forgetting Tai Chi moves
- C. being corrected in public D. being chosen to show moves

34. Which opinion would the writer most probably support?

- A. Old habits die hard.
- B. Truly listening builds trust.
- C. Words matter more than actions.
- D. It’ s wise to accept others’ corrections.

35. What would be the best title for the passage?

- A. The Beauty of Tai Chi B. My Long Journey with Tai Chi
 - C. How to Master Tai Chi D. Tai Chi Teaches Me to Grow
- C

Lenses (镜片) are useful tools that help us see things more clearly. They are widely used in our daily lives. They help us read small words in books and take clear photos. They are also used to help people who are nearsighted (近视的) or farsighted. Today we’ ll talk about two main types: convex and concave lenses.

Imagine you’ re using a magnifying glass (放大镜) to read small words in a book. What happens when you move the glass closer to the words? The letters get bigger, right? That’ s the power of a convex lens. Convex lenses are thicker in the middle and thinner at the sides. They can make passing-through light come together. This is why magnifying glasses, camera lenses, and even the lenses for some old people use convex lenses to see more clearly.

To know more about how they work, let’ s learn two key terms for convex lenses. When parallel light (平行光线) enter a convex lens, they meet at a single point. That meeting point is the focal point. The distance between the lens and the focal point is the focal length. The thicker the convex lens is, the more strongly it bends light, so its focal length becomes shorter.

Different from convex lenses, concave lenses are thinner in the middle and thicker at the sides. When light passes through concave lenses, it spreads out. You can find concave lenses in your daily life. For example, if you are nearsighted, your glasses probably have concave lenses. You are nearsighted because the light entering your eyes does not focus exactly on the retina (视网膜). When you wear glasses with concave lenses, the light spreads out first and then enters the eyes, allowing it to focus correctly on the retina. In this way, you can see things clearly.

Lenses are simple but amazing. They make our daily life easier and show us fun science around us.

36. Which of the following have convex lenses according to the text?

- a. Cameras. b. Mirrors. c. Magnifying glasses.
d. Nearsighted glasses. e. Farsighted glasses.

A. acd B. ace C. bce D. abd

37. How does a concave lens work?

A. B. C. D.

38. If parallel light meets a thinner convex lens, we can know that _____.

- A. it bends light more strongly B. its focal point lies farther away
C. it works like a concave lens D. it fails to gather light together

39. What is the structure of the passage?

A. B. C. D.

40. What is the purpose of the passage?

- A. To tell us how to protect our eyes. B. To give advice on learning physics well.
C. To introduce lenses and their science. D. To explain how lenses help eyesight.

Come and share your thoughts on living on the moon! | Come and share your thoughts on living on the moon!

My favorite saying goes, “_____” We should keep this spirit and never stop exploring the moon, because it can bring great advantages to China. We won’t depend so much on the Earth’s limited resources, since we can develop new energy on the moon. Besides, it can provide more living space for people as our Earth becomes too crowded. So let’s move forward bravely for a new and bright future on the moon. (Xinyi, Xichang) |

Yes. It would be exciting to go to space by rocket, as you’d rocket off the ground really fast! Once you land on the lunar surface, where gravity (重力) is only one-sixth that of the Earth’s, you’ll surprisingly find yourself able to float (漂浮) around freely and lift super-heavy things easily—something you could only dream of doing on Earth. Best of all, with no thick atmosphere (大气层) to block your sight, you could admire the shining Earth and bright stars in the silent sea of space. (Leo In, Toulouse) |

My friend Susan and I love enjoying the beautiful moon together at night, but if humans live on the moon, we’ll no longer be able to appreciate such beauty. Building homes and sending food and water there would cost billions too. On top of that, the moon’s atmosphere is too thin to support human life, which means we’d need even more money to create a livable environment. So I think we should solve today’s problems on Earth first, like world hunger. (Kate DeBusk, Greeley) |
